

Jessica Scherr, PhD, Psychologist, Nationwide Children's Hospital, Columbus, OH

Dr. Scherr is a Nationwide Children's Hospital psychologist and delivers evidence-based assessment and treatment practices. She has developed a natural proclivity towards integrating research and clinical practice and further understanding variability in developmental outcomes in children with and without neurodevelopmental disorders. Her current research interests are aimed at characterizing developmental outcomes and patterns of risk and resilience in children with neurodevelopmental disorders and other rare diseases, such as Batten disease. She aims to promote optimal outcomes in this population through clinical research that identifies developmental and behavioral patterns that can be targeted for intervention.
