

My Support Network Needs Your Support

Dear colleagues, friends, neighbors, and family,

I am not a professional fundraiser. I know and love someone with Batten disease. Caring for a Batten patient is demanding in every possible way – physically, mentally, and emotionally. The BDSRA Foundation provides Batten families with critical support. The Foundation does what they cannot, and goes where they cannot.

There is currently no cure for Batten disease. To be clear, it is a terminal illness.

The BDSRA Foundation:

- Provides vital information about Batten disease
- Pursues and provides the funding required for research
- Advocates for Batten families at the national level
- Engages siblings in healing and inclusive ways
- Identifies clinical Centers of Excellence across the country, who have set standards of care for individuals living with Batten disease, participate in research, and provide the best treatments available

The BDSRA Foundation has created a community of caring that, frankly, sustains so many in the global Batten “family.”

Right now these people who support affected families need your support. The Foundation’s annual appeal is going on now through the end of the year. You would be amazed at how much they do with every dollar.

If you cannot give, please share this with someone you know who can.

I urge you to take time to get to know more about Batten disease on their website at BDSRAfoundation.org.

I know you’re busy. Thank you for reading my note and for considering supporting the BDSRA Foundation.

Warmly,
